Description

During the summer Sussex comes alive with many species of beautiful butterfly. This course gives you the chance to learn more about their ecology, life cycles and where to find them.

What we'll do

There will be an indoor session to introduce you to the butterflies of Sussex and then we'll head off around the reserve looking for admirals, fritillaries, hairstreaks and other species.

The tutor

Michael Blencowe works for the Sussex Wildlife Trust as their Community Wildlife Officer. He's based in Lewes and runs a packed programme of events all across Sussex celebrating the rich diversity of wildlife found in our county. Through these walks, talks and training courses he inspires people to become more involved with studying, recording and conserving the fantastic species and habitats we have here in Sussex.
